and for the last two years has lived near this deponent; That some time in the year 1823 the said Jonathan was ill of the bilious fever and was brought to the house of this deponent, ~~this deponent~~ it was believed that the said Jonathan would die in consequence of the ill treatment of his wife Ann Jane unless he was removed from his own house. That the said Anna Jane was taken sick immediately afterwards, and her husband although hardly able to leave his bed, was so far as he was able to be, kind and affectionate to her in her illness. & further this deponent is fully of the opinion that it is altogether the fault of the said Ann Jane that her husband cannot live happy with her — she has left his bed & board & has been absent now about about six months — Betsey Allen
