individual and the general order. It has already become a model for the deep changes which must take place in American education."

EDWARD A. OLDHAM, Winston-Salem Journal and Sentinel.

"There should be at least one college such as this in every state, operated independently of the big universities, to provide custom-tailored education for those who want it and to do the experimenting of which the big schools are almost incapable."

WILLIAM T. MCCLEERY, PM's Picture News.

"A ringing answer to those who say that modern education is not in harmony with modern living . . . "

Friends Magazine.